1. Resistance activities in Rumania are sporadic in character and are not directed by any central organization. Resistance groups appear to have no knowledge of each other. Their weapons appear to be adequate but they are very short of ammunition. Resistance activities are limited in scope and do not conform to any general plan.
2. The resistance groups hide in the mountains and forests, some times visiting the neighboring villages where the inhabitants secretly supply them with food.
3. [REDACTED] saw several trucks carrying Militiamen who had been wounded in a skirmish with partisans. The inhabitants generally possess little information concerning such clashes and usually do not know of the existence of these resistance groups.
